Local Review of Sustainable Development Progress in Africa Published

Five African localities have published Voluntary Local Reviews (VLRs) on their frameworks and progress towards regional and global sustainable development goals. These VLRs – in Accra, Harare, Ngora District, Victoria Falls and Yaoundé – were supported by ECA and are among a first wave of local-level reviews undertaken across Africa, with more on the way. Sub-national governments and stakeholders play a pivotal role in the implementation of the 2030 Sustainable Development Agenda and Agenda 2063 of the African Union. Grassroots initiatives undertaken at the local level have been integral in responding to COVID, protecting the environment, and ensuring inclusive development across Africa.

COVID-19 flare-ups, diminished policy support, and lingering supply-chain bottlenecks will see the global economic recovery cool more than previously estimated in 2022, after last year's expansion clocked the fastest post-recession pace in eight decades, according to the World Bank. Global gross domestic product will probably increase 4.1% this year, less than a 4.3% forecast in June, the World Bank added during its semi-annual Global Economic Prospects report on January 11, 2022. By 2023, annual output is expected to remain below the pre-pandemic trend in all regions with emerging-market and developing economies, while in advanced economies, the gap is estimated to close.
