New job opening with the Columbia Center on Sustainable Investment - Senior Legal Researcher, Climate Law and Finance

By:

Columbia Centre on Sustainable Investment

December 14, 2022

Senior Legal Researcher, Climate Law and Finance

Columbia Law School's Columbia Center on Sustainable Investment (CCSI) and the Sabin Center for Climate Change Law are recruiting a Researcher to support the newly launched Climate Law and Finance Initiative. The researcher will work collaboratively with CCSI's and the Sabin Center's Leadership and Research Staff to analyze the interrelated legal, finance, and policy pathways critical to achieving global climate goals and facilitating the energy transition, and the corresponding implications for public, private, and institutional financial sector actors, regulators, and alliances. Successful candidates will have a good understanding of how financing and investment can play a role in addressing climate change and the critical importance of appropriate systems, laws, policies and practices to achieve climate goals and facilitate the energy transition. Successful candidates will also demonstrate willingness to learn new areas and to work in a highly interdisciplinary, flexible, and dynamic environment.

More details on the position and instructions for applying can be found here.

View online: New job opening with the Columbia Center on Sustainable Investment - Senior Legal Researcher, Climate Law and Finance

Provided by Afronomicslaw